Corrections in designs can be worked out in this way at a small cost and in a few days, in some cases a few hours. If left entirely to the service to develop it would take years, and many, many thousands of dollars. Men who do not believe in this method of investigation are getting scarcer every day, and if you do not believe in it, don't tell the other fellow, as you may be sure that he is politely smiling to himself. We have had a great many hundred men from all walks of railroad life visit our laboratory, and they invariably say they were glad to have been there. With the work of our special engineers, assisted Fig....
