To climb the bank he had to go around our meatrack, and as his nose came even with the fresh meat he gave a terrified snort and stampeded past our fire, while the dogs strained wildly at their chains and howled like a wolf pack. This was our last wilderness adventure and the rushing waters of the Kantishna swept us downward to the broad bosom of the Tanana. The Tanana carried us eighty miles or more to the northwest, and on the twenty-sixth of July we pulled across the broad sweep of the mighty Yukon. As the houses of Fort Gibbon came into view, we lay back lazily and let the current bring us in, for our work was ended and we had reached the end of our long trail.
